THE IDEAL POULTRY HOUSE.

The ideal poultry house is difficult to describe. There seems to be nothing about the poultry business in regard to which there is a wider difference of opinion than on this point. It seems to be the general opinion that the type of house is not very important so long as it is dry, well ventilated, and the fowls have plenty of the proper kind of food. Food is the essential thing, and of course certain foods are much better than others. A. M. Brown of North Rochester, Mass., gives his opinion on this particular point in the following letter. He says: "I have fed nearly all the poultry foods on the market, but not with such returns as Popham's Perfect Poultry Food gives. My hens have an average of 80 percent to their credit. Last winter it was 50 percent. I know this food is the best on the market."

If you want to know more about this food and the best ways of using it, write to C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., for his booklet, "Profitable Poultry." It will be sent free, postpaid, to anyone mentioning this paper.

PROFITABLE SNAKE KILLING.

A Rattlesnake Hunter Who Collects the Bounty and Sells Oil and Skins.

H. T. Brown of Newton, Wis., claims to be the only rattlesnake hunter in the Northwest, and one of the few in the United States. Hunting diamond-marked rattlers is his occupation and forms his sole mode of earning a living. Oftentimes his income for a single week is over $100.

Two modes of earning a living are open to Brown, one to hire himself to a farmer on a salary basis, and the other as a free lance, in which he roams the country, collecting only the bounty on the snakes he kills. Brown's price for his services a week is $50, and he guarantees to rid a 100-acre farm, if not too rocky, of all the snakes in a week and destroy their homes.

For fifteen years Brown has been hunting snakes and making a living at it. In all that time he has not been bitten. He goes out much as the expert angler goes after fish. His secret of catching snakes is just as elusive as that of anglers getting fish. He will not divulge the snakeholes he has found, although he says finding them is an easy matter where one knows how. A dozen rattlers in a single nest is not an unusual record for Brown.

One day last fall while working in the hills south of La Crosse he killed thirty-one snakes. The next day he foraged in nearby townships and killed twenty-seven. The following day he killed forty-two. The state pays fifty cents for each rattler, while the skin and oil add to the profitable nature of snake hunting. Brown gets $3 an ounce for oil and a good skin will bring $1.50. The biggest snake captured last fall was in the town of Farmington. It bore twenty-two rattles.

A stout hickory club is Brown's only weapon in his hunting. He never allows a snake to get directly in front of him and moving away, in the position a rattler can strike a deadly blow. Brown follows the snake from the side, without fear of a strike. He says one may place his hand within an inch of a rattlesnake's head on the side and be safe from danger. "The rattlesnake cannot strike from the side," he declares.

"When the snake turns, if you can get him to do so, strike your blow quickly and firmly. The occupation is not hazardous if you know what you are doing. I won't vouch for a beginner. I have had a few snakes strike at me, but when the rattler's tail is away from you and you are at his side, you are safe. Sometimes I take my dog with me, and he can smell rattlesnakes. All dogs can, and he serves as an alarm clock for the reptiles. Rattlesnakes like rocks but won't live where there is much noise. That is why they aren't found in quarries, but only in wild places."

"I once made $128 in a week, but I can't keep it up. I average between $20 and $100 a week during the summer, but in the winter I don't do anything. Huh! I'd rather hunt diamond-marked snakes than work in a store."—La Crosse correspondence of Minneapolis Journal.

BIGOTRY RAISED TO NTH. POWER.

A Chicago Magazine's Utterances on Judge Taft's Candidacy.

As a sample of some of the literature circulated during the campaign, I reprint an editorial which appeared in a monthly magazine published in Chicago and edited by Seth C. Reed. The magazine is called "World Gospel and Rescue Journal, and its motto is 'The whole Bible for the whole world.' Its leading editorial, entitled 'National Honor,' is as follows:

"Shall the Christian honor of this great nation be trailed in the dust for four long years by the election of William Taft, a pronounced Unitarian, as president of the United States of America?"

"If such a calamity is to come to our American people, shall it be by the consent of the ballot of the Christian church? Shall such a dark cloud of blackness and darkness settle down upon our Christian homes, our wives and little ones without an awful protest from the Christian pulpit, the Christian press and the Christian public? What would our Puritan fathers think of such rank infidelity at the head of the nation? What will Jesus think of you, Christian voter, if you fail to offer a mighty protest against it? How can you ever again say that you love and honor Jesus after you have supported a party and a ticket headed by a man who repudiates Jesus Christ as the Son of God?"

"I have never been a Democrat, and withdrew from the rum-soaked politics of this country more than twenty years ago, but I should much rather see William J. Bryan, who is at least Christian in his faith, go into the executive mansion than a man whose life and influence denies the divinity of Jesus Christ. If William Taft is elected to the presidency in November, the Stars and Stripes should hang at half-mast for four years."

"With every ounce of my being I repudiate such flagrant insults of Christianity orthodoxy."

Now what do you think of that?—From The Voter.

THE EUCALYPTUS FOR PROFIT

It Has Been Demonstrated That It is a Paying Crop.

By NORMAN D. INGHAM.

Eucalyptus planting has now passed the experimental stage and may be considered without question as a commercial proposition. The value of the crop and the possibilities of growing it in California have been sufficiently demonstrated to make judicious plantings even on a large scale perfectly safe, with an assurance of sure and reasonably large profits. It is important, however, for the planter to consider in the light of the best information the nature of the product which he will produce, or, in other words, the market which he will attempt to supply with his eucalyptus trees.

Eucalypts may be used either for fuel or for hardwood lumber. For the former purpose the prevailing prices of wood in most of our cities and large towns during the past few years have been such as to make the fuel proposition appear extremely attractive. Many glowing prospectuses are being offered to the public on this basis. It should be remembered, however, that the production and use of natural oil are rapidly increasing, that gas and electricity for heating purposes are cheap in the cities and that all three are coming more and more into use every day in the place of wood. In fact, wood as fuel is rapidly becoming a luxury, and there is in the mind of the writer no reason for expecting any increase in its use as fuel by the general public. He therefore believes it unprofitable and unwise to enter upon eucalyptus planting with the sole idea of raising wood for fuel. The profits to be derived from eucalyptus in the future will be found in hardwood lumber for wagon wood, farm and other implements, railroad, coach and house furnishings, furniture, etc. Ties, telephone poles and bridge timber will also prove profitable. For any of the above named products of eucalyptus at least ten years' growth will be required, and of course the older the trees the greater the profits in proportion.

The wood of most of the eucalypts makes good fuel. A grove of blue gums five years old, set out 6 by 6 feet apart, under favorable conditions
